EAC and Site Visit Take-aways

• Strengths
  – OSU has a good policy infrastructure
  – Good data already collected (Julie C-H a good ally and now on our internal advisory council)
  – Many chair development resources
  – OSU cares about people
  – Entrepreneurship could be our niche – perceived as an opportunity for national identity

• Challenges
  – Women of color
  – Beware of burnout with co-PIs and participants
  – Evaluation: internal/external assessment
  – Need better communication (we now have an official team)
• Things to consider
  – This is a time of massive change at Ohio State
    • We are poised to help deans/chairs through structural changes, semester calendar, etc.
  – What will Ohio State look like when CEOS is institutionalized?
  – Think about how we’ll deal with leadership transition
  – Get others on campus to help us do our work through effective dissemination of information (communications team facilitating this)
Autumn 2009 Workshop for Deans and Chairs

- Identifying sources of power personal, positional, relational
- Recognizing levels of commitment compliance, commitment, internalization
- Defining the need for change
- Describing the desired outcome
- Utilizing a change team
- Action learning
- Engaging stakeholders
- Powerful questions
- Measure and track progress

U.S. Commerce Secretary announced on 9/24/09 plans to create a new Office of Innovation and Entrepreneurship within the Department of Commerce and launch a National Advisory Council on Innovation and Entrepreneurship. Both new initiatives will help leverage the entire federal government on behalf of promoting entrepreneurship in America.

...will be geared toward the first step in the business cycle: moving an idea from someone's imagination, or from a research lab, into a business plan.
